

Introducing the IDSFF

Our world is changing rapidly and irreversibly, and at the heart of this change lies data. Data science has become key to understand developments in technology, political power shifts, environmental change, crime prevention and everything else that concerns our lives.

The International Data Science Film Festival (IDSFF) is the first film festival related to data science in the world. It discovers, celebrates and challenges the role of data science in our society. In 2022 the second edition will take place

Open air cinema in the center of 's-Hertogenbosch

During 30 June – 2 July, 2022, the doors of the Mariënborg are open again, for the second edition of the International Data Science Film Festival. In the beautiful garden in 's-Hertogenbosch an open-air cinema will be erected for three summer evenings. To watch and listen, to participate and to celebrate. And above all to experience the impact of data science.

The festival offers three days of films, panels, discussions, Q&A's and networking opportunities. It draws innovators, scientists, filmmakers, critics and thought-leaders to discuss the state of affairs and the future of our society.

Every film will be introduced by a keynote speaker and followed by a participative dialogue session.
